

Dear twenty-three old me,

You're in the right place and I trust you are always right. The decisions you take are wise. You've grown up enough to make them right even if they turn the other way around. The situations that you've faced in the past made you stronger . The mistakes that you've done made you brighter. Remember to always keep that graceful smile on your face . Do whatever your heart wishes however high the thing you wish for is situated.

Hope for good always . see the good qualities in everything and everyone. Cause no one is truly ideal. Everything in this universe has both good and bad sides. You have to choose the best part of it - the goodness tactfully. Problems come and go but the only thing that always remains sturdy is your attitude. Never miss that attitude of yourself . That's the thing that really really matters in the end even if you run out of money.

Keep up the relationships uptight . Never let them break down due to mere negligence and quarrels that don't make sense. Those are the things that hold you up even without anything. The mind keeps pondering everywhere and so our thoughts. Keep that monkey mind steady in order to sort out the things easily. Situations won't turn out to be smooth and good always. If they do , there's something wrong in your life. But those tough times seem to be the best if you change your perspective. The journey will be the best as you stand from the rest , with the determination that differs. And from the soul and heart that desires

Signing off hoping for the best of you
